

Special Report

HOW DOES JOBB WORK?

- Every day there are economic news reports that come out from different governments that affect the price of different instruments.
- For example, the first Friday of every month at 8:30 AM EST the U.S Government releases data about the number of jobs that were created in the previous month and the current unemployment rate (Non-Farm Employment Change/ Unemployment Rate). The exact second that data is released, the price of different instruments such as oil and treasury bonds, spike north or south depending on the news results.
- The JOBB software automatically enters us into the trade's the moment the news comes out which allows us to make money on huge spikes and EXIT out with PROFIT within seconds.
- The JOBB software places two pending entries 3-5 seconds before the news comes out. The pending entries are placed, 3-12 ticks depending on the report, from the current market price of the instrument we are trading. This allows us to be in the best position when the news comes out and causes the price to spike north or south.
- With JOBB, we are NOT gambling and betting that the price will go either up or down; instead we are using a very sophisticated and scientific methodology to place pending entries on both sides of the market price, allowing us to take advantage of the rapid price movement. If it happens to be dull we aim to get out at breakeven or minimal loss.
- Once we are entered into a trade, depending on which direction the price "blasted off to" (long or short), our other pending entry will automatically cancel and a STOP LOSS will go into effect to KEEP US SAFE.

HOW DOES JOBB MANAGE RISK AND MITIGATE LOSS?

- The JOBB software manages Risk by integrating a STOP LOSS automatically each time we enter a trade.
- For example, suppose we are trading Crude Oil which is priced at $100 even before we get into the trade using the JOBB software. Let' assume that we used a 10 tick bracket which means that 3 seconds before the news comes out we have 2 pending entries, 10 cents above the market price at $100.10 (To buy long) and 10 cents below at $99.90 (To sell short).

- Suppose the news causes Crude Oil to rise in price drastically. We would get filled around $100.10 and earn profit as Crude Oil continues to rise in price. Suppose 5 seconds into the trade, Crude Oil is now at $100.30. If we were to close out of our position trading only 1 contract we would earn $200 (20 ticks of profit) which is great.
- What happens if we didn't get out and the price shoots down below our entry point of $100.10? We would indeed be in the red. However, our stop loss which is set into the software before the trade would already be standing by to keep us safe and minimize loss.
- For example, suppose we set a 5 tick stop loss. Once Crude Oil dips to $99.95 the stop loss will automatically close you out of the position with minimal loss. Jay will recommend stop settings for each of the reports we trade.
